WHAT TO EXPECT

The special prosecutor in the Trayvon Martin shooting case has filed a charge of second-degree murder against George Zimmerman. What will happen next? CNN

ARRAIGNMENT

The arraignment likely will happen within two to three weeks of the arrest and will be in open court. Zimmerman will be arraigned and must enter a plea on the charges, most likely “not guilty” (at this stage, defendants almost never plead guilty). Often the defendant will waive his appearance at the actual court hearing. The attorney can enter a written plea of “not guilty” on the defendant’s behalf.

DEFENSE MOTION TO DISMISS BASED ON FLORIDA’S ‘STAND YOUR GROUND’ LAW

If Zimmerman is charged, he is entitled to a pretrial evidentiary hearing on whether he is entitled to the immunity based on the law. The burden at that hearing is on the defense to prove that it is more likely than not that Zimmerman was justified in using deadly force. In Florida, an individual can use deadly force anywhere (with no duty to retreat) he is not engaged in unlawful activity, is being attacked in a place he has a right to be and if he reasonably believes his life and safety are in danger.

PRETRIAL

Both the prosecution and defense could file a slew of pretrial motions in the case that deal with anything and everything from turning over documents and evidence to keeping certain evidence out at trial. It is just too early to tell.

TRIAL

Zimmerman is charged with murder in the second degree. Florida law describes murder in the second degree as an act that is “imminently dangerous to another and demonstrating a depraved mind” if it is an act or series of acts that meet certain criteria. In Florida, a charge of murder in the second degree carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. Florida does not offer the chance for parole. The sentence would, however, take into account several mitigating and aggregating factors.

ARREST MADE IN MARTIN'S DEATH

2ND-DEGREE MURDER CHARGE AGAINST GEORGE ZIMMERMAN

Reuters

JACKSONVILLE/SANFORD, Fla. A special prosecutor in Florida charged neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman with second-degree murder Wednesday in the shooting death of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin—a move protesters had been demanding for weeks in the racially charged case.

Zimmerman was under arrest at an undisclosed location in Florida, officials said.

Special prosecutor Angela Corey's decision came 45 days after the fatal shooting in a quiet gated community in the central Florida town of Sanford. Police had declined to arrest Zimmerman, who is white and Hispanic, based on his account of self-defense, setting off civil rights demonstrations around the country.

“I can tell you we did not come to this decision lightly,” Corey told a news conference in Jacksonville.

“Let me emphasize that we do not prosecute by public pressure or by petition. We prosecute based on the facts of any given case as well as the laws of the state of Florida.”

Zimmerman

The decision on whether to charge Zimmerman, 28, for the death of Martin, 17, had rested with Corey since she was appointed by Florida's governor March 22.

The firestorm of protests forced Sanford's police chief to step aside and the regularly assigned prosecutor to remove himself from the case on March 22, leading to Corey's appointment.

By seeking second-degree murder rather than a lesser charge, such as manslaughter, Corey reaffirmed her reputation as a prosecutor who will seek to bring the most serious charge possible. If convicted, Zimmerman could face a prison sentence of up to 25 years to life.

Zimmerman said he acted in self-defense during a confrontation with the unarmed Martin on Feb. 26.

As the basis for their refusal to arrest Zimmerman, police cited Florida's “Stand Your Ground” law, which allows people to use deadly force when they believe they are in danger of being killed or suffering great bodily harm.

The shooting received scant media attention at first, but Martin's parents and lawyers kept making public calls for Zimmerman's arrest. That eventually led to a media frenzy, and outraged online messages by celebrities about the case.

The disputed facts surrounding the shooting have been picked apart endlessly by TV commentators while dominating the headlines and reigniting a discussion about guns, self-defense laws and what it means to be black in America.

Zimmerman's relatives and supporters have insisted he is not racist and has been unfairly vilified. They said he feared for his life during his altercation with Martin and was justified in using deadly force.

The case took an unexpected turn Tuesday when the two lawyers representing Zimmerman, Craig Sonner and Hal Uhrig, dropped him as a client because they said they had lost contact with him. They asserted, however, that he had left Florida.

Coupled up in a singles world

Ana Fernatt
» redeye@tribune.com

Spring is here and we're all just trying to get sprung. Deer are growing horns, nuts abound for the squirrels, and bunnies are doing what they do best. Just the other day, a man had his friend stop a moving car so he could get out and run down the block after me. When he caught up to me, he was out of breath and wanted to tell me that I looked cute. That, my friends, is hustle. Singles season has officially arrived.

Typically, I'm one to abide by the very clear-cut Chicago dating seasons: Go wild in spring, pick a few faves in summer, lock one down by fall, hibernate in a den made for two through the winter, repeat. This year, my clock's a little thrown off. I'm not sure if it was the mild, amazing winter that made me act so early, but I entered a plus-one earlier this year ... and I intend to keep it that way. What can I say? It's always summer when you're in l-o-v-e.

My girls are a totally different story. While they hung close to the laws of physique, holding up with a warm winter body, I was single as a jaybird. Now, the appropriate climate for antics has arrived and off they are: wearing adorable outfits, dining al fresco on patios and drinking on rooftops. Sure, I'm there too in a breezy dress with my tapas holding a flute of Veuve, but there's something different. While they are locking eyes and aligning targets, what is the happily coupled coquette to do?

I've been out with my friends, talking with a group of people and casually dropped the B-bomb: "Oh, my BOY-FRIEND (POW! POW! *screaming children*) likes that too." The nice, new man friend, who moments before was suuuuper interested in knowing all the names of my Beanie Babies in alphabetical order —by birthdate—will make a face like I've just kicked him in the junk and wants to vomit all over my Facebook status. Right before he stops talking to me entirely. Off the market, off the list of people he'd care to talk to—even when bored.

It's not like entering a relationship makes you suddenly unable to interact with other people. I'd argue that you should be someone's exclusive only if you make each other upgraded versions of your solo dolo self. Coupled you should be even more awesome than single you. The difficult part is that the motivation is way different. While all the single boys and girls are sniffing each other up and down, I've already caught my fox and the hunt makes me tired.

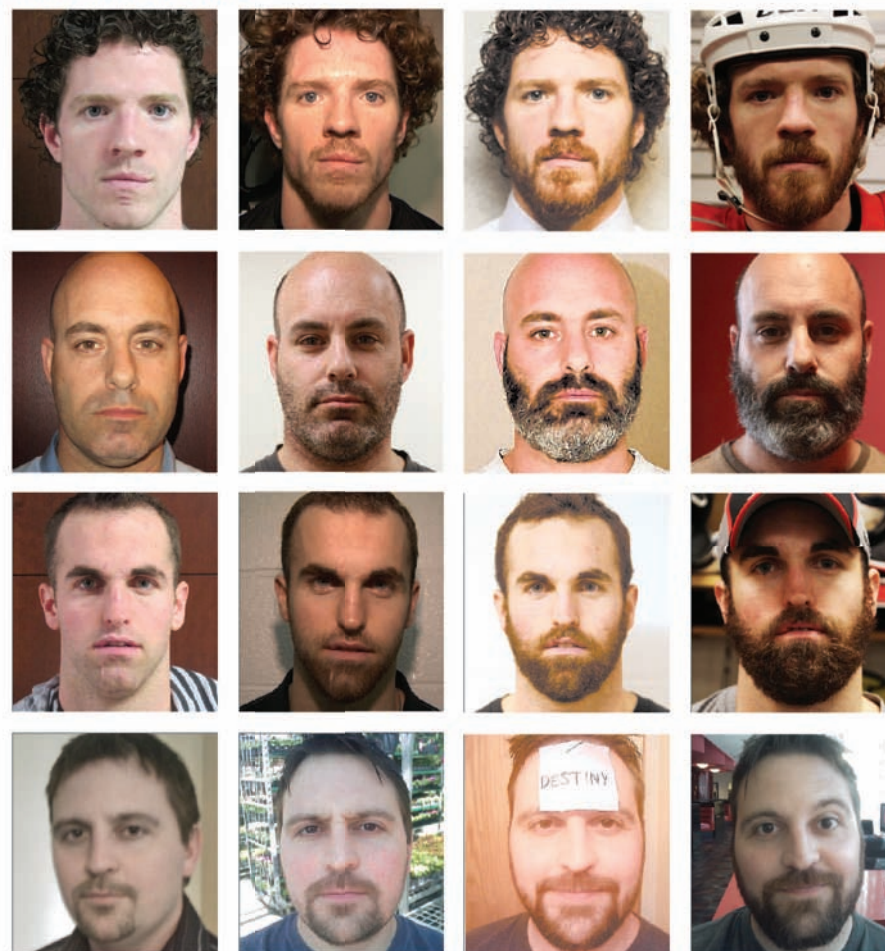

The fact is finding that fulfilling, satisfying and mutually inspiring relationship is every singleton's endgame. Maybe it's not the current maneuver, but it's the overarching strategy.

To my fellow duos I say, "Own that [bleep]." Every time I have a tinge of jealousy over the excitement and variety of my single friends' dating life, I remind myself to invest in my solid twosome. That is soooo much harder to find. The grass might be greener on the other side, but a content couple is standing on top of a gold and diamond mine.

ANA FERNATT IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

No-bid deal nixed

Mayor, CTA held private talks about $300M plan

Chicago Tribune

The Emanuel administration and the CTA engaged in private discussions on a $300 million no-bid contract with the maker of the transit agency's new rail cars, but the talks collapsed amid disclosures about the poor quality of the company's work, the Tribune has learned.

Bombardier Transportation's pitch to build and operate a South Side rail car overhaul facility on vacant city and CTA land in a CTA rail yard took off in May after Mayor Emanuel was elected, CTA officials told the newspaper.

The talks over the public-private partnership continued for 10 months, "in keeping with the mayor's priority of creating jobs and generating economic development," CTA spokeswoman Molly Sullivan said.

CTA lawyers had been working to justify the unusual practice of awarding such a large contract without competitive bids, the transit agency said.

But the city and CTA backed away from the talks in recent weeks amid Tribune reports that disclosed defective-parts problems with Bombardier's ongoing production of 706 new rail cars under a $1.14 billion contract.

First word of the previously undisclosed discussions with Bombardier comes as Emanuel is asking the City Council to give him broad authority to partner with the private sector to build everything from schools and sewers to ports and railways. The details uncovered by the newspaper highlight both the potential benefits and pitfalls of such public-

WHY A NEW FACILITY?

Because there are no Chicago facilities equipped to perform midlife overhauls on rail cars, the CTA has to pay to send its aging cars elsewhere, CTA spokeswoman Molly Sullivan said. The Bombardier proposal would have saved the CTA those shipping costs while creating much-needed jobs on the South Side.

private partnerships.

A vote on the mayor's proposal to create an "infrastructure trust" could come as soon as next week. Emanuel's plan calls for a panel of business experts appointed by him who would identify infrastructure projects that would be built for the city and find ways to fund them other than the traditional practice of government borrowing money and paying off the debt with taxes. The panel's meetings and deliberations would not be subject to open meetings or public records laws.

Emanuel's press office repeatedly refused to answer questions about what involvement the mayor had in the Bombardier discussions. On Tuesday, his top spokeswoman acknowledged only that the mayor was initially attracted to the Bombardier plan because of potential jobs. She said the mayor soured on the idea because of the no-bid aspect, without saying when that happened.

"The mayor doesn't do sole-source deals," Emanuel communications director Sarah Hamilton said. "It was a nonstarter. It was never going to happen."

CTA officials said the no-bid component had nothing to do with scuttling the deal and

The proposed Bombardier train overhaul facility was to have been built on CTA and city-owned land that includes the CTA's 63rd Street Lower Yard, at 63rd Street and Calumet Avenue near the Green Line on the South Side, seen here. PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE that Emanuel had encouraged it all along.

"Very early, even before he took office, he asked me how we might turn this billion-dollar expenditure into an opportunity for jobs," said CTA President Forrest Claypool, who was appointed to the post shortly after Emanuel's inauguration. "So when I took office, we took that mandate and ran with it."

Plan for premium Taste experience

Chicago Tribune

Mayor Emanuel's plan to charge Taste of Chicago attendees for premium seating to see musical acts in Grant Park and for the chance to eat special meals prepared by prominent Chicago chefs cleared a City Council committee Wednesday.

Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events Commissioner Michelle Boone told aldermen the hope is that the revenue will help Taste break even after three years in the red.

Under the plan, the city would sell seats at the Petrillo Bandshell for $25 each night and charge $40 for three-course meals cooked by chefs including Stephanie Izard of the West Loop's Girl & the Goat.

Boone said the Taste will draw "national headliners" to perform each night of its shortened, five-day run from July 11-15, but she would not name any of the bands. Boone insisted the $25 cost for a seat will be "a bargain." Lawn seating would remain free under the proposal, which will head to the full City Council for a vote next week.

"All music areas," Boone said when asked about the bands Taste goers can expect. "R&B, pop, jazz, country."

In recent years, Taste food vendors have complained that festival crowds have shrunk in part because the musical acts were not as prominent as in years past, when the likes of Stevie Wonder and Santana drew huge turnouts to the lakefront.

Ald. Walter Burnett (27th), the council's Special Events Committee chairman, predicted the new revenue streams will help Taste, which has a $6.8 million budget this year, break even.

"It's a funny thing. Sometimes people's psyche, they would rather go in an area where they have to pay than be in the free area, even if it's just as good as the area where you have to pay," Burnett said.

Shaved speeding fine advances

Instead of $50 fines for driving 6 to 10 mph above the speed limit near schools and parks, a $35 fine would be assessed under Mayor Emanuel's revision to an ordinance governing the use of speed cameras in Chicago.

Brighton Park saw two homicides in two days last week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found. A 13-year-old boy was shot to death Saturday in the 4600 block of South Spaulding Avenue, police said. One day earlier, a 28-year-old woman was fatally shot in the 4000 block of South Albany Avenue, officials said. Brighton Park has recorded two homicides so far this year. The Southwest Side community area logged 10 homicides last year, RedEye data shows.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were recorded in the last week in Chatham, Chicago Lawn, East Garfield Park, Portage Park, Rogers Park and Roseland, according to information from officials. Eleven homicides have been recorded so far this month. Thirty homicides were logged in April 2011, according to RedEye data.

Is it an iConspiracy?

4 NEW YORK The U.S. Department of Justice on Wednesday brought a lawsuit against Apple and several publishing companies over a scheme to fix e-book prices.

The suit stems from the 2010 release of the iPad, when Apple reached an agreement with five publishers to release books on its then-new iBookstore. The DOJ said Apple colluded to raise the price of e-books with CBS' Simon & Schuster, News Corp.'s HarperCollins, Hachette Book Group, Pearson's Penguin unit and Macmillan.

European authorities also are probing Apple and the publishers for similar antitrust violations. Attorneys general for Connecticut and Texas led a handful of other states in separate litigation against the companies as well.

Before the release of the iPad, Amazon's Kindle was the pre-eminent e-book reader on the market. Amazon forced publishers to sell most books at $9.99—a price that came in below the cost of the books.

The DOJ found that booksellers were unnerved by the discounted e-book price structure Amazon launched in 2007, and they went to Apple in late 2009 to find a way to force Amazon to raise its prices. The iPad proved to be the perfect tool to accomplish that.

The alleged conspiracy placed many books at so-called "agency pricing," putting them on the market for about $12.99 and giving Apple a 30 percent cut. About three days later, Amazon allowed publishers to set their own prices, resulting in higher prices on the Kindle as well.

"This action drove up e-book prices virtually overnight," Sharis Pozen, head of the DOJ's antitrust division, said at a news conference. "Let me be clear: When companies enter agreements that prevent price competition, that is illegal."

Apple and the publishers declined to comment.

Tax Day more deadly?

The odds of getting into a fatal crash increase by 6 percent on tax filing day, according to a study published Wednesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association. For the cautious drivers out there, here is your warning: This year, taxes are due April 17.

5 Baby found alive in morgue

She was a tiny thing—cold as a frozen bottle and left for dead. But she would survive. 1-week-old Luz Milagros Veron is Argentina's miracle baby. Pronounced dead after her premature birth, the baby withstood more than 10 hours in a morgue refrigerator before being found alive.

6 Charles Manson denied parole

Notorious killer Charles Manson, 77, was denied parole Wednesday after a California parole panel "could find nothing good as far as suitability" for his being paroled, a commissioner said. Manson didn't show up for his parole hearing, held at a state prison in Corcoran, Calif.

7 Nine Peruvian miners rescued

Nine Peruvian miners emerged into the daylight Wednesday after six days trapped in a collapsed mine. State TV showed the miners leaving the mine, each supported by two rescuers. They wore sunglasses to protect their eyes from the light, after spending so much time in darkness.

Brandon's Beardos

If anyone knows beards, it's Blackhawks left winger Brandon Bollig. The hip star has the right scruff: He maintains a trim beard that looks GQ without trying too hard. RedEye gave Bollig five pictures of Blackhawks and asked him to draw the best beards for his teammates. He may not want to show his face around the locker room now. —TRACY SWARTZ

BOLLIG READY TO MAKE HIS MARK IN BATTLE FOR THE CUP

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

SWM, 25, athletic build. Skates well, new to Chicago, looking for someone to hug. Well, not that kind of hug.

You don't want to be hit on by Blackhawks left wing Brandon Bollig, who is known for wrapping his arms around opponents on the ice—right before swinging at them. These romps have made the hugger-cum-sluggo a breakout star since he was called up from the Rockford IceHogs in February.

Though fights are less common in the playoffs than regular-season games, Bollig said he still plans to do what makes him a hit: hit.

"Everyone likes to see fights and stuff, and I bring that physical aspect to the game," Bollig said.

In honor of the Blackhawks' best-of-seven series against the Phoenix Coyotes, which starts Thursday in Arizona, RedEye presents five things to know about Chicago's newest swingman.

TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

1 The dust-ups are generally mutual.

Just call him the Sultan of Swing. Bollig said he doesn't have a fighting style per se, but he's picked up various techniques over the years. One of the top questions he gets is how the fights begin. "It's kind of just mutual. Somebody asks if you want to fight, and if he wants to, then you go," Bollig said. "If something happens, like a big hit [on a teammate] or something, then it's a little different."

But before you label Bollig a fighter and not a lover, know that "he's nice. He's kind," Blackhawks left wing Bryan Bickell said. "Lot of guys think you need to have a couple screws loose to be a tough guy in the league ... but he's a down-the-ground guy."

2 He's tight with ex-IceHogs but says there's no Rockford clique.

West is best. Bollig, Bickell and Blackhawks right wing Andrew Shaw played in Rockford before being called up to the Blackhawks. "It's easier to transition when you have guys like that—more familiar faces. I'm lucky enough to have more than one here," Bollig said. The group often dines together tweets one another on Twitter.

But not everything is peachy with the Rockford clan. Bollig is always texting, said Bickell, who bunks with Bollig on the road. "I take control of the room," Bickell said. "I got a little more experience. I take the leadership by taking all the remotes and [picking] when to get up, when to go to bed." For his part, Bollig said he lets Bickell think he's running the room, and Bickell talks in his sleep. Both seem to have no trouble smack-talking when they're awake.

3 He can be a bit of a pill.

The Blackhawks have suffered from various injuries this year but Bollig is on top of his health. "He takes a lot of vitamins," Bickell said of Bollig. "He's got like a big pill bottle, and you can always hear him walking around and shaking those pills." Bollig defended his vitamin use, telling RedEye he knows what's good to take and what's not. "I think that's something that I've always done—try to take care of my body. I do definitely take a lot of pills, and it's just to keep my body ready."

4 He calls downtown home.

He plays at the United Center and lives in the center of Chicago. Bollig said he was surprised when the Rockford general manager called him a few months ago to tell him he was being called up to the Blackhawks. Since it's unclear how long his stint with the Blackhawks will last, he's staying at a hotel downtown. "When you're right in the middle of everything down on Michigan Avenue, it's a good time," Bollig said. He said he wants to eventually visit Millennium Park.

5 He breaks the Cardinal rule in Chicago.

The St. Charles, Mo., native openly cheers for his hometown baseball team, the Cardinals. "I have a couple of St. Louis hats I wear around," Bollig said. "I grew up really not liking the Cubs, and so I would like to go to a couple of games if we're around. It's definitely a big rivalry." Cubs fans, beware. He knows how to hit back.

1 What's your favorite part of the Stanley Cup playoffs?	It's a toss-up between the drinking and the drinking.	The parts that people who barely watch hockey during the year can enjoy. In other words: All of 'em.	Gotta be the facial hair.	Everything.	I can't believe you actually asked me this question.
2 Jonathan Toews, Patrick Kane and Marian Hossa may play on the same line. Discuss.	The family that plays together stays together. Well-known fact.	Ah, they're going with the old Chattanooga Thoroughbred strategy. Interesting.	First to five goals in the series gets to own the Coyotes.	I'll be in my bunk.	I filled my cup just thinking about it.
3 Give Blackhawks enforcer Brandon Bollig a new nickname.	The Hit Man.	The Chattanooga Thoroughbred. Only because it means nothing in the answer above.	The Bodyguard.	Mr. "I'll Be Back In Rockford As Soon As Carcillo's Better."	BB Gun.
4 Hockey is to Phoenix as ...	... the Fisker Karma is to Justin Bieber. It's there, but no one really knows why.	... a band that almost ended is to a band that may have peaked.	... cactus is to Chicago.	... 80-degree weather in March is to Chicago: Both are caused by global warming. Wait, no.	... baseball is to April. Doesn't the freezing weather tell you something?
5 Who are the Three Stooges of Chicago sports?	Ozzie Guillen, Ozzie Guillen and Ozzie Guillen.	Over the years, too many to name. Better to look on the bright side or risk ivy-covered depression.	On the road with Blackhawks beat writers, it's hard to narrow it to three.	Is this where I make a joke about the Cubs?	Football, baseball and basketball.

Can Chiropractic Help Me? HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

We are often asked, "What's the best way of finding out whether or not a doctor of chiropractic can help my problem?"

We believe the answer can be found in a complete chiropractic consultation and examination, including x-rays.

And to help find out for sure, we will do a complete consultation and examination, including x-rays, if necessary, (procedures that normally cost $390 or more) for only $25.

We will make this special program available through April 30, 2012.

The only exception to the offer is Medicare and Medicaid.

$25.00 Reg. $390 Value

Must present ad at time of appointment.

YOUR INITIAL VISIT WILL INCLUDE:

- A Private consultation with the doctor.
- X-rays, if necessary.
- A thorough spinal examination including orthopedic & neurological test.
- A confidential report of our findings.
- An explanation of our treatment procedure if we determine chiropractic can help you.
- A REFERRAL TO THE PROPER SPECIALIST IF WE DETERMINE CHIROPRACTIC CAN'T HELP YOU.

THESE CONDITIONS ARE SOME OF THE DANGER SIGNALS:

- Headache
- Arthritic pain by stiff neck
- Loss of sleep
- Scoliosis (Curvature of the spine)
- Leg pain & numbness
- Arm pain & numbness
- Backache
- Fatigue
- Tension
- Whiplash injury

HARD SCIENCE

Advance your career or prepare for advanced scientific study at Northwestern University.

Careers in science can offer engaging, important work as well as security in today's unstable job market. In fact, employment opportunities for biological, medical, environmental and other health-related scientists are expected to grow faster than the average for all occupations through 2018.*

You can prepare for advanced study in the sciences or boost your professional knowledge base with part-time evening courses in biological sciences, chemistry and physics from Northwestern University School of Continuing Studies. Choose from an undergraduate major in biological sciences, a premedicine or another science-related post-baccalaureate certificate, or simply take the individual courses that meet your needs.

You'll learn from experienced instructors in state-of-the-art classrooms and labs. Northwestern University was recently awarded a $2 million grant by the Howard Hughes Medical Institute to strengthen undergraduate science education as part of a program that included 50 of the nation's top research universities.

GO NUTS!

SETTLING SPORTS-BASED ARGUMENTS ONE DEBATE AT A TIME

The setup: Whether you're fighting off an Easter candy coma or just wish you didn't have to wear a winter coat in April, this should cheer you up: It's playoff season! The Blackhawks begin their chase for the Stanley Cup on Thursday, and the Bulls begin their quest for the NBA title in a few weeks.

This round: More exciting postseason: the NBA or the NHL?

NHL
Brian Moore
BRMOORE@TRIBUNE.COM
@REDEYESPORTSGUY

The NBA playoffs mean the Bulls, Derrick Rose and the forces of Good vs. the Heat, LeBron James and the forces of Evil. No matter how strong your Red Wings hatred, it can't compare with the Bulls standing in for the wishes and dreams of the rest of the world in an epic battle against the unholy trinity that tortured us all with its bragging and taunts before last season even started. Everyone hates the Heat! And there is no more important task than humiliating LeBron James. Help us, Derrick Rose (and Joakim Noah and Carlos Boozer and Luol Deng), you're our only hope!

The argument that tips the scales in favor of the Stanley Cup playoffs could begin and end with Jim Cornelson's stirring national anthem before every Blackhawks game at the United Center. But I won't be that lazy. It's also the fierce intensity, the raucous atmosphere and the do-or-die ramifications of every possession, shot on goal or clearing of the puck. One goal indeed can be the difference.

Starbury is immortal—in China

The Chinese Basketball Association is honoring former NBA player Stephon Marbury with a life-size bronze statue of him depicting the moment he held the CBA championship trophy. Marbury scored 41 points in leading the Beijing Ducks to the title. "Words can not explain how I felt when I heard this," Marbury said, according to USA Today. We feel the same way, Stephon.

Rose likely to face the Heat

Derrick Rose participated in a full practice Wednesday and is likely to play against the Miami Heat on Thursday night at the United Center. "He's fine," coach Tom Thibodeau said. "He went through practice and we'll see where he is [Thursday]. He'll be game-time again." Oh, it's on, Miami. It's on.

NOW SHOWING

Here are six other films playing this weekend at CIMM Fest. Find the full schedule at cimmfest.org. M.P.

!!!! Charles Bradley: Soul of America

Anyone with a heartbeat will be inspired as Bradley invites seemingly his entire New York neighborhood to the album release show for "No Time For Dreaming."

See it: 9 p.m. Friday at the Society for Arts, $10

!!!! I Want My Name Back

The documentary's flaws can't fully diminish the power of a shocking story about The Sugarhill Gang.

See it: 7 p.m. Friday at Wicker Park Arts Center (Wonder Mike, Master Gee, director Roger Paradiso in person), $10

!!!! High Road

Nearly every scene in this pot comedy features a few small-to-medium-size laughs, which happens more easily when a movie packs funny people like Ed Helms, Abby Elliott, Joe Lo Truglio, Lizzy Caplan, Zach Woods and Horatio Sanz.

See it: 7 p.m. Friday at Logan Theater (Pumphrey, Caplan, Lo Truglio, Walsh, Woods, Joe Nunez in person), $10

!!!! Ecstasy

The biggest takeaway from drug drama "Ecstasy" is that the charismatic Adam Sinclair should be offered all the parts going to Sam Worthington.

See it: 9:30 p.m. Friday at Logan Theater (Welsh and Heydon in person), $10

!!!! The Brooklyn Brothers Beat the Best

In the oddly winning road dramedy, Alex (Ryan O'Nan) and Jim (Michael Weston) prove why struggling musicians choose to struggle.

See it: 7:15 p.m. Saturday at Logan Theater, $10

!!!! The Beat Is The Law: Fanfare For The Common People

If you claim a group (British band Pulp in this case) had a "long and torturous journey" to fame, you gotta prove it.

See it: 9:15 p.m. Saturday at the Society for Arts, $10

!!!! Queens of Country

Lizzy Caplan delivers such a wonderful turn ... that the movie didn't have to be half-good to be worth seeing just for her.

SEE IT

When: 7 p.m. Thursday

Where: Wicker Park Arts Center, 2215 W. North Ave.

LIZZY CAPLAN IS BUZZING BIG TIME IN 2012—STARTING AT CHICAGO FEST

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Do not read this interview with “Queens of Country” star Lizzy Caplan and picture her as moody Janis Ian from “Mean Girls.” This year Caplan becomes a leading lady, not a sidekick. She not only delivers a knockout turn in “Queens,” which opens the Chicago International Movies and Music Festival on Thursday, but stars in the anticipated romantic comedies “Save the Date” and “Bachelorette,” which some expect to be this year’s “Bridesmaids.”

In the funny, strange “Queens of Country,” Caplan plays Jolene, who distracts herself from an unhappy life with her fiancé (Ron Livingston) by searching for the owner of a lost iPod. The device contains the old country music Jolene loves, and she’s sure the owner must be the man of her dreams.

From her home in L.A., the 29-year-old actress talked about being mocked for wearing a cowboy hat, her big year ahead and when life feels like a country song.

What were your thoughts on country music growing up, and how have they changed since making the movie?

For some reason it seems to be a popular thing to say that you like all kinds of music except country. I hear that a lot. And I think I used to say that when I was a kid, not knowing what the hell I was talking about. I wasn’t raised listening to these guys or girls so it was sort of new to me. They talk about it a little bit in the movie in a very odd way—like everything else in the movie—the difference between old country and new country. I haven’t found too much new country I’m a fan of, but that old stuff, man, I can listen to it all day.

If it makes you feel better, I think my line used to be, “Everything but country and classical.”

[Laughs.] I never said that because I played classical. So I was clearly a much more high-brow child than you were.

You listened to a lot of old country preparing for the movie. How much did that influence you? When I watch too many British movies, I almost start talking with an accent.

Oh, no, you’re that guy?

I said almost!

[Laughs.] OK good. I think it’s fun to get totally [immersed] in a role, and it was very easy to do that with this because we shot it in this little town in Arizona called Cave Creek that seemed almost stuck in time. They’re very into country music. It’s like, the population is, you’re either a cowboy or a biker; that’s the vibe I got. It’s an amazing town. ... I wore a cowboy hat every day and then wore a cowboy hat for like a month when I got home until the teasing—I thought the teasing would subside and it didn’t, so I [stopped wearing it].

What was the comment that broke the camel’s back?

It was just incessant. Like I know I’m not a cowgirl or whatever. [Laughs.] It was just me loving this movie that I had just finished and people were just rolling their eyes at me. I probably would have done the same thing to a friend. Like, “We get it, you just did a movie that had line-dancing and country singers in it. We get it. Now you’re wearing a cowboy hat. It’s so adorable.”

You have so much coming up this year, and “I don’t want to sound cheesy ... but ‘there’s real soul in the streets of Chicago!’”

“Queens of Country” could be a star-making performance. Did it feel special when you were making it?

“Queens of Country” is such an odd piece of filmmaking I think people are either going to completely love it or be completely turned off by it. I’ve done a few movies like that in the past, and I always prefer that. I always prefer somebody to have a visceral reaction, whether it be positive or negative, than to be indifferent toward something I’ve done.

“Queens of Country,” did I think [laughs] it’s going to be a star-making thing? I don’t like to think about those things because I think it’s sort of irrelevant. The reason why I wanted to do this movie and it lived up to all of my expectations is because every part of it was completely challenging and weird. ... I was lucky enough and still am lucky enough to be in a position where if you take those shots and the movie doesn’t work, nobody really sees the movie. So you feel safe in taking these chances.

What aspect of your life, if any, has ever reminded you of a country song?

Oh, man. A lot of ‘em. Just like, [laughs]

the aggression toward men who have done something not so great to me. I’ve been sort of fortunate to not be screwed over by lots of guys. [Laughs.] But I think I create these narratives in my mind because, especially when I was listening to that much country music, it was like wanting to go and kick the [bleep] out of a guy who wronged you and came home drunk and cheated on you with your best friend. I don’t really have a lot of those experiences in my real life, but I tried to at least create this fantasy world where I was being wronged all the time so I was like pissed at guys for no reason.

What did you imagine yourself doing in these situations?

It tends to be in these songs, the guys get beat up. I always wanted to be somebody who, in a situation, I mean, hopefully not like somebody was doing something awful to me, but maybe I saw a friend across the way, being [bleeped] with by a guy and I go and [laughs] smash a beer bottle over their head or something. I have these weird country/western violent [laughs] fantasies.

No second helping for 'Hunger' director

Gary Ross cites time constraints for bowing out of 'Catching Fire'

The Wrap

Gary Ross has bowed out of the "Hunger Games" sequel, citing time constraints for his exit.

His role in "Catching Fire" has been subject to much speculation in recent days, and late Tuesday, he and Lionsgate issued statements announcing his exit from the adaptation of Suzanne Collins' book.

"As a writer and a director, I simply don't have the time I need to write and prep the movie I would have wanted to make because of the fixed and tight production schedule," Ross said, calling the decision a difficult one.

Lionsgate, for its part, said it was sorry he would not return for the second installment.

"We were really looking forward to making the movie with him," the studio said in a statement. "He did an incredible job on the first film and we are grateful for his work."

The movie, which opened March 23, al-

Director Gary Ross on the set of 'The Hunger Games' ready has grossed more than $300 million in the U.S. alone. It stars Jennifer Lawrence, Liam Hemsworth and Josh Hutcherson and is set in a dystopian future; youths must compete in the titular Hunger Games, wherein they are forced to eliminate their competitors.

Ross co-wrote the script with Collins; their collaboration replaced the version written by Billy Ray.

The question now is: Who will take the reins of Lionsgate's lucrative franchise? There are three books in the trilogy. The first "Hunger Games" installment has exceeded expectations.

In exiting the project, Ross called "The Hunger Games" the happiest experience of his professional life and disputed claims that sequel negotiations with Lionsgate were rocky.

"Lionsgate was supportive of me in a manner that few directors ever experience in a franchise," Ross said.

"And contrary to what has been reported, negotiations with Lionsgate have not been problematic. They have also been very understanding of me through this difficult decision."

He also praised producer Nina Jacobson, the "brilliant Suzanne Collins," "the gifted and remarkable Jennifer Lawrence" and the rest of "the incredible cast."

Lionsgate said the parting "will not be the end of our relationship" and that it looks forward to working with Ross in the future.

Francois Arnaud on 'The Borgias'

'Borgias' vigilante Arnaud takes control

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» cwagner@tribune.com
» @showpatrol

"The Borgias" returned April 8 with Francois Arnaud literally racing back to our TV screens as cardinal-turned-vigilante-killer Cesare Borgia.

Cesare has become a breakout role state-side for the 26-year-old Montreal-bred actor, who will play a soldier in an indie movie about the Civil War before going back to Hungary to film Season 3 of "The Borgias" later this year (if the show is renewed).

But for now, Arnaud is anxious to see more episodes of the new season of the Showtime drama, which airs at 9 p.m. Sundays. Cesare, he says, will take control of the fortunes of the 15th-century family headed by patriarch Rodrigo Borgia (Jeremy Irons), who schemed his way into becoming Pope Alexander VI last season and is the father of sibling rivals Cesare, Juan (David Oakes) and Lucrezia (Holliday Grainger).

"He kind of goes rogue, such that he perceives he's the best person to defend the family, and he's not waiting for his father to approve of every single one of his actions anymore," Arnaud said of Cesare last week during a phone interview. "Yeah, he's becoming the man."

Life in Montreal hasn't changed all that much for the actor since "The Borgias" debuted last year. He was fairly well-known in his hometown for his Canadian TV appearances and films. He didn't seem to know he was the object of fan affection on the Internet, where one can find sites dedicated to him.

"I don't Google myself, so I don't know these things and I'd rather not," he said. The he laughed and talked about meeting a fan recently. "I was presenting at the Juno Awards and I was just walking backstage and there's a girl, I guess who was a friend of the show, and she's chasing me and she's asking me, 'Can I just get a hug from you?' And so yeah, we hugged."

Arnaud would rather talk about Cesare and "The Borgias." In the new season, the feud between Cesare and Juan becomes increasingly vicious and played out in Sunday's premiere in the form of a dangerous horse race. Arnaud actually rode the horse himself during the dangerous shoot.

"I remember the second day of the race where I was worrying so much, I thought I wasn't going to be able to do it," he said, laughing. "I said, 'Just give me half an hour,' and I popped like five Advils and rubbed my thighs with like cold cream and I was ready to go."

Devil May Cry HD Collection

Xbox 360, PlayStation 3

There isn't a specific name for the breed of frantic action games such as "God of War" and "Bayonetta" that feature dark anti-heroes using outlandish weapons to battle bad guys, but the genre arguably started with Capcom's early 2000s "Devil May Cry" games. This value-priced collection of Dante's adventures includes remastered versions of the first three games in the series, and it's recommended for both action-loving newcomers and vets of "DMC." Be warned, though, that game design has changed a lot in the past decade. "Devil May Cry's" non-intuitive camera angles and other aspects of the trilogy are showing their age.

Tiger Woods Golf '13

Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, PC

Tiger Woods kicked one of his clubs out of frustration at the Masters last week, and you might find yourself doing the same with your video game controller

if you don't have the patience for this new golf sim. The Total Swing Control system is rewarding for those who can endure the steep learning curve, but others may want to invest in a Kinect or PlayStation Move, as the motion controls are more fun and more forgiving than the control stick. "Tiger Woods Golf '13" plays a solid game of golf overall, even if it leaves you wondering why EA Sports must release a version of it every year other than to maybe help Tiger with his hefty alimony payments.

World of Tanks

PC

Massively multiplayer games tend to be dominated by "Dungeons & Dragons"-loving fantasy or spaceship heavy sci-fi, which is why it's refreshing to see a new MMO populated by tanks, not elves. The name of "World of Tanks" is quite literal—there are more than 150 armored vehicles from the U.S., Russia and Germany to choose from, and you join up on a team of other players and cooperate to defeat both A.I. and fellow human opponents. The game is free, but it employs a devious pay-as-you-go system for premium parts, meaning you'll be tossing down a decent amount of cash if you're serious about the game.

Los Angeles Times

As most know by now, the Coachella Music and Arts Festival is occurring over two long weekends this year instead of one, with the same lineup repeating twice. That means that when it kicks off Friday night, 120-odd bands ranging from superstars such as Radiohead and Swedish House Mafia to first-timers such as the Head and the Heart and Jeff Mangum will have arrived in the desert near Indio, Calif., from around the world, and many will remain in the area for some or all of that 10-day period.

That's a lot of spare time—and you know what they say about idle hands. Not only is there a lot of opportunity to get into typical rock 'n' roll trouble, but also a lot of freedom to roam the mystical desert looking for thrills or generating lyrics for plaintive love songs about the heart being like a cactus or desert tortoise. Below are a few tips for making the most of time spent in and around the Mojave.

U2's Joshua Tree

A common misconception is that the album "Joshua Tree" is named after the area where the Irish group U2 and photographer Anton Corbijn shot the cover. In reality, Bono & Co. found the perfect lone tree at Zabriskie Point, 200 miles north in Death Valley National Park, and did a photo shoot there. To those who still feel like making a trek to find the actual Joshua tree on the album's cover, don't bother. It fell a decade ago.

Day-tripping

Trekking through the Mojave Desert can prove dangerous business, even if a hallucinating Jim Morrison, Donovan and the "Entourage" cast did it before you and came out alive. An easier trip is to the Integratron, where 70 years ago an aeronautical engineer named George Van Tassel claimed to have encountered extraterrestrials. According to the Integratron site, "a saucer landed from the plant [sic] Venus, woke Van Tassel up and invited him onto the ship. There the aliens gave him the technique for rejuvenating living cell tissues. In 1954 he and his family began building a structure they called the Integratron to perform the rejuvenation."

Hallowed ground

Just off 29 Palms Highway in Joshua Tree is Rancho de la Luna, the recording studio where the sounds of Kyuss and Queens of the Stone Age were forged, and where artists including PJ Harvey, Dave Grohl and the Arctic Monkeys have recorded. The studio, which is in fact a ranch house, helped birth a strumming, start-and-stop aggro sound that still reverberates today.

Barbecue, music, beer and pool

As for music that's still being played in the desert by performers in the here and now? Pappy & Harriett's in Pioneertown is a legendary barbecue joint/beer trough that draws legions of renegades from all over the area. Coachella performers GIRLS and Yuck are doing a Goldenvoice-approved gig there April 19, so Pappy & Harriett's could be a hub for many musicians during the week.

Hip-hop makes the leap to Coachella

Los Angeles Times

Over the past two years, the Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival has featured at least one hip-hop artist headlining per night. Maybe that's a sign that the festival's bookers are getting more adventurous in marquee acts or that rappers are looking to add hard-partying indie and rave kids to their fan portfolio. This year's fest, April 13-15 and 20-22 in Indio, Calif., sports a particularly good hip-hop bill, from headliners Snoop Dogg and Dr. Dre on down. Here are a few highlights. GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

SNOOP DOGG AND DR. DRE

We don't need to tell you that hearing "Ain't No Fun" on a festival field of 90,000 fans will be a landmark West Coast rap moment. Dr. Dre and Snoop Dogg wrote the blueprint for L.A. party music 20 years ago, and even as lions in winter, their quiver of slow-rolling jams is unimpeachable. Expectations are high for Dr. Dre to uncork more tunes from his forever-almost-released "Detox" album, and if you own a marijuana dispensary within a 200-mile radius of Indio, now is the time to order extra stock.

A$AP ROCKY

Though his crew got in a well-documented scuffle with the audience at SXSW, the young Harlem's rappers ascent still seems inevitable. His mixtape "LiveLoveA$AP" remains one of the strongest rap releases of last year, full of spooky and melancholy beats by producer Clams Casino. His outspoken criticism of hip-hop's homophobia is also a strong point in his favor.

AZEALIA BANKS

"Quick witted" barely begins to describe this saucy MC, who has torn up the Internet in recent months with firecracker singles such as "212" and "... up the Fun." A debut on Interscope is due soon, but she's already made enemies (the Oakland novelty MC Kreayshawn) and powerful allies (producer Diplo). Those who lamented Nicki Minaj's turn to straight-ahead pop might find what they missed right here.

KENDRICK LAMAR

The rising L.A. MC cemented his next-big-thing status with "Section.80," an album of ambitious beat-making paired with a frank lyricism that asks the big questions about life from the wrong side of L.A.'s tracks. Lamar admits the dark appeal of street life, but this record runs deep with empathy for its casualties while remaining a total banger. A recent L.A. set opening for Drake with A$AP Rocky suggested stardom is impending.

STRAIGHT-UP

Spring

5 cocktails to celebrate the season

By Lisa Arnett and Emily Van Zandt | REDEYE

This winter may have been mild, but that doesn't mean we're any less excited for the arrival of spring—especially when it comes to cocktails. Warmer weather tends to bring out fresher, lighter mixes behind the bar, with plenty of gin and herbal undertones and the arrival of muddled fruit additions that will become a staple as spring moves into summer. Here's what we thought of a few of the season's new concoctions.

LMARNETT@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEEATS; EVANZANDT@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDRINKS

BARRY BRECHEISEN FOR REDEYE

FELONIOUS MONK

Order it at: Ada Street (1664 N. Ada St. 773-697-7069) in East Bucktown

Price: $10

In the mix: gin, yellow chartreuse, Benedictine, lemon juice, egg whites and Abbey-style ale

Refreshment factor: I was hard-pressed to single out the flavors of the ingredients on their own; instead the whole thing just blends into a smooth, sippable drink that is more understated than other bars' attempts to integrate beer into their cocktails. Love the speared cherry garnish. —LISA ARNETT

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

COMING SOON LOOK FOR THESE SPRING COCKTAILS TO MAKE THEIR WAY ONTO MENUS.

NIGHTWOOD (2119 S. Halsted St. 312-526-3385)

This Pilsen restaurant's latest punch offering, called I Could Go On Singing, is a blend of tequila, lemon juice, Aperol, yellow chartreuse, chamomile tea and sparkling wine ($22 for a half carafe; $44 for a full carafe).

DOUBLE A (108 W. Kinzie St. 312-329-2444)

Stop in this lounge below River North's Mercadito to try Nature's Mistake ($13), made with gin, lemon juice, Benedictine and apricot liqueur.

TINY LOUNGE (4352 N. Leavitt St. 773-463-0396)

Dream of even warmer weather when you order the Siesta Key ($10) at this Lincoln Square bar. It's a mix of aged rum, clementine juice, lemon juice, mint leaves and ginger beer with a kumquat garnish.

THE DANDY LION

Order it at: The Barrelhouse Flat (2624 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-857-0421) in Lincoln Park

Price: $11; In the mix: muddled cucumber, gin, absinthe and lemon juice

Refreshment factor: This drink made me wish there were patio seating at Barrelhouse. It's light, slightly sour and comes in a large pour with plenty of ice and a cucumber slice garnish. If you're not an absinthe fan, proceed with caution: The bitter, herbal spirit boldly cuts the sweetness of the cucumber. —EMILY VAN ZANDT

PUNCH

Order it at: Nellcote (833 W. Randolph St. 312-432-0500) in the West Loop

Price: $10

In the mix: cognac, vermouth, orange liqueur, ginger beer
Refreshment factor: Garnished with cucumber, orange and a sprig of mint, this rosy-hued drink feels like a garden in a glass. As a good punch should, it doesn't taste overly boozy, but still packs a decent buzz that sneaks up on you with the last sip. A splash of ginger beer adds some sparkle without significant spice. —L.A.

LONESOME HERO

Order it at: Scofflaw (3201 W. Armitage Ave. 773-252-9700) in Logan Square

Price: $8

In the mix: reposado tequila, Aperol, guava juice, lime juice and banana ice
Refreshment factor: Gin is the proclaimed focus here, but this tequila concoction shouldn't be overlooked. With a metal straw at the ready, this is one of those drinks that can go back shockingly fast. The mild sweetness from the banana-flavored ice and guava temper the smokiness of the tequila for a smooth, mild drink I could imagine ladling out of a punch bowl. —E.V.Z.

THE 'S' PLAN

Order it at: Bangers & Lace (1670 W. Division St. 773-252-6499) in Wicker Park

Price: $10

In the mix: bourbon, green chartreuse, lemon juice, demerara and a cava float
Refreshment factor: Bourbon isn't the first spirit I think of when I think of spring, but this isn't too heavy, with the chartreuse and lemon bringing an herbal tint and the cava kicking in an unexpected fizz. —E.V.Z.

Is a Bond with a beer still a Bond?

Emily Van Zandt

» evanzandt@tribune.com
» @redeyedinks

Just before I graduated college, my roommate insisted we throw a James Bond-themed party.

Reasons: It was her boyfriend's birthday. She thought her boyfriend looked like Daniel Craig. She wanted an excuse to wear a slinky dress. And she almost always got her way.

During the course of the night, I settled into the in-no-way-legal bartending gig in the kitchen that had been making me money at parties for months. Only this time, there were martinis involved—shaken, not stirred. They were about as well-balanced as you'd expect a college house party drink to be, but that wasn't the point. A Bond party just wouldn't be complete without a few martinis.

But that might not be the case anymore: In the upcoming Bond flick "Skyfall," the legendary spy won't be sipping his trademark cocktail—he'll be swigging a Heineken.

Product placement is nothing new, but this buy marks a pretty big change for the franchise and—personal thoughts on the taste of the beer he'll be ordering aside—I'm not sure that I like that Bond is downgrading from a cocktail to a brew.

It's rare that you'll find a man (or anyone for that matter) ordering a classic martini anymore. I have a hard enough time persuading my boyfriend and other pals to order anything other than tallboys of beer to back glasses of brown liquor. And now James Bond is going to turn into a beer drinker?

We're doomed.

If life imitates art (or at least product placement), then we're in for a lot more of those trademark green bottles after "Skyfall" debuts. But the ad buy will never truly kill the cliché—tuxedo-clad men will probably still enjoy posing with the trademark cocktail from time to time. And if the franchise keeps going, then who knows? Maybe Bond will be trading in the Heineken for a shot of whiskey next.

I wouldn't exactly say "no" to that. But what do you think? Do you approve of a beer-sipping Bond? Head to redeyechicago.com to cast your vote in our poll.

White whiskeys packing a punch

Chicago Tribune

When white whiskeys first turned up on liquor store shelves and cocktail menus a few years ago, they seemed, at best, playful alternatives to vodka and the familiar barrel-aged brown stuff. But in recent years, a surprising thing has happened: White whiskeys got good.

Increased production paired with a wider array of grain bills—that is, the ingredients from which the whiskeys are made—has resulted in the spirit becoming various combinations of smooth, luscious, spicy and creamy. They have developed complex layers and flavors and, depending on the white whiskey, have become primo sippers or cocktail ingredients.

David Perkins, owner of High West Distillery in Park City, Utah, says white whiskeys “should be looked at no differently than blanco tequila.” And he should know: He distills a smooth, creamy white whiskey made of oats and recently spicier, bolder white rye.

“They have their anejo and blanco,” Perkins says of tequila. “Whiskey has its anejo. Why can’t whiskey have its blanco?”

All whiskeys and tequilas are initially white. Spending time in barrels adds color and flavor to both spirits. In the tequila lexicon, the most barrel-aged version is called anejo (or extra anejo if you’re feeling bold). In the whiskey world, the most barrel-aged is simply considered whiskey. End of story. Or it was until now.

These days, distilleries such as High West are tweaking recipes to maximize and vary their white whiskeys. Perkins, for instance, considers his oat whiskey “the Grace Kelly of our lineup ... beautiful and smooth” and useful for mixing in cocktails. The rye, he said, “is meant to be sipped on its own, no ice, no mixing.”

“Whiskey has its anejo. Why can’t whiskey have its blanco?”

—David Perkins, High West Distillery owner, comparing whiskey to tequila

3 TO TRY

>> High West Silver Western Oat

A luscious body (thanks to the oat, which usually makes for a luxurious spirit) is backed up by a smooth, clean finish. A fine mixer or worth drinking straight. The High West rye is also worth your time for a bolder example of the style.

>> Koval Rye Chicago

Spicy and bold (which ryes usually are), but smooth. Another one that would work mixed or straight.

>> MBR Black Dog Kentucky Corn Whiskey

Distilled from corn smoked in a tobacco barn, this is earthy, rewarding and complex enough to be reminiscent of mezcal or scotch. You’d do yourself a disservice to mix this with anything more than a few drops of water.

RIGHT: In the past few years, the best white whiskeys have developed complex layers and flavors. BILL HOGAN/TRIBUNE

Young, fresh and well-dressed

Los Angeles Times

The recent Nickelodeon Kids' Choice Awards brought out the hottest young stars to the bright orange carpet at the University of Southern California Galen Center. The show was notably more casual than, say, the Oscars or Golden Globes, but the attendees managed to look appropriate and stylish without floor-length gowns or tuxedos.

Actress-singer and Justin Bieber girlfriend Selena Gomez stood out in the crowd of mini-dresses in a look that was fresh and playful. Gomez, who took home the award that night for favorite TV actress, stars on Nickelodeon's "Wizards of Waverly Place."

She chose a cropped bustier and skirt, both from the Dolce & Gabbana's spring 2012 ready-to-wear collection; orange and pink studded stilettos by Cesare Paciotti; and jeweled hoop earrings by Ippolita jewels. You can get the look for less with these pieces.

« THE BEST BAT VEHICLE?

We loved the Batwing, are huge fans of the Batmobile and think the Bat tank is hideous, but our hearts were stolen by The Penguin's ducky car in "Batman Returns." The radar makes a quacking noise!

CAPE COUTURE

Is the new Batman the most fashionable yet?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Entertainment Weekly's latest cover reveals Christian Bale and Anne Hathaway striking a pose in their Batman and Catwoman costumes for "The Dark Knight Rises," our first official look at the flick's fashion. This leads us to an important question: If Batman were to be in a fashion show, would they call it a batwalk? No, no, the real question is: Which Batsuit is best? Check out our sartorial picks. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

BATSUIT

BEST 'BATMAN FOREVER'

Call us crazy, but we really like the full-chest Bat shield on this one. Recent suit iterations are a little too much function and not enough form; this one's a nice balance between old school and rubber mania. Val Kilmer, however, is not our favorite Batman.

FEMALE COSTUME

BEST CATWOMAN, 'BATMAN RETURNS'

How the heck did Michelle Pfeiffer sew that thing on her home machine? More important, how the heck did she get into it by herself? Maybe her pet cat helped. Regardless, this is what Christian Siriano is talking about when he says "fierce."

VILLAIN COSTUME

BEST THE JOKER, 'THE DARK KNIGHT'

Also the all-time best Batman villain ever? There's definitely a case to be made. Heath Ledger's Joker had no labels in his clothing, his pockets were full of nothing but lint and knives and the story about how he got those scars got more terrifying on each new telling. Runners-up: The Penguin from "Batman Returns" and The Joker from "Batman."

WORST 'BATMAN & ROBIN'

If you need visible nipples in your suit of protective rubber armor, something is going wrong. (Fun fact: Victoria's Secret also makes a built-in nipple bra.) And much as we love George Clooney, his chin just wasn't up to this gig.

WORST POISON IVY, 'BATMAN & ROBIN'

We understand that when you live in a greenhouse with an ooze-fed manbeast, you probably don't have a lot of mirrors lying about. But that doesn't mean Uma Thurman had to take all her fashion cues from the Spice Girls. Oh wait, it was 1997 ...

WORST THE RIDDLER, 'BATMAN FOREVER'

Between Jim Carrey, Tommy Lee Jones' Two-Face from the same flick, and Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Batman & Robin" Mr. Freeze, this was another tough call. It was the far-too-revealing green spandex that won the day.

THE DIGIT $15 MILLION?!

That's the value of the deal Britney Spears is rumored to be close to signing to become the latest celebrity singing judge on "The X Factor," deadline.

com reports. Simon Cowell's singing competition is looking to replace original judges Paula Abdul and Nicole Scherzinger.

'Hunger' hounds

Team Peeta and Team Gale, better mark your calendars. Chicago will play host to the first Hunger Games Convention on June 23 and 24 at the Westin O'Hare in Rosemont. Film stars including Willow Shields (who played Primrose) and Amandla Stenberg (who played Rue) are scheduled to attend.

Jenny McCarthy
Brian Urlacher

Does Brian Urlacher have his sights set on one hot and hilarious Chicago native? The Bears linebacker had dinner with actress Jenny McCarthy at Mastro's Steakhouse in L.A. on Tuesday night. The couple tried to sneak out the backdoor afterward, but the pros at TMZ caught them on camera entering an SUV.

DATE NIGHT

Who's the boss?

The big, bad mayor is coming back—and he's bringing T.I. with him. Starz will premiere Season 2 of its Chicago-based political drama "Boss," starring Kelsey Grammer, on Aug. 17 with new cast members Jonathan Groff, Sanaa Lathan, T.I. and Steppenwolf Theatre ensemble member Amy Morton, the network announced Wednesday. The season is filming now, so keep an eye out for them around town!

By the beard of Zeus!

Naturally, the recently confirmed "Anchorman" sequel has a long way to go, since Will Ferrell and Adam McKay are still writing the script. McKay did, however, offer Salon a few tidbits to hold us over: "I'll say one phrase for you: custody battle," the director/co-writer said. "I'll give you one other one: Bowling for dollars." Somewhere, Baxter barks with approval.

Bon rapper?

Is Justin Vernon going to bust a rhyme? The melancholy frontman of Bon Iver is releasing a full-length album with rapper friend Astronautalis, mtv.com reports. "A lot of my fans are like, 'Oh this is going to be amazing: Astronautalis rapping and Justin singing choruses.' It's not going to be that," the rapper told citypages.com. Stay tuned ...
